Leverage the entirety of your professional and business experience into digital, social good projects that have measurable societal impact. Choose a cause of personal significance to you, or select from a list of sustainable development goals organized by the United Nations.

The Digital Leadership Experience at Columbia University is a one-year program for busy executives or career alumni that provides a customized education plan at the Center for Technology Management, where we enable seasoned professionals to harness the power of digital technology to make a lasting impact on the social sector. Members of the center enjoy various lectures and mentoring from world-class faculty and mentors.

The Columbia University Center for Technology Management and the United Nations are working closely together on the United Nations Technology Innovation Lab (UNTIL) program with the goal of using innovative technology to solve some of humanity’s most pressing needs. You may tackle one of the UN’s 17 Sustainable Development Goals or create your own objective.

The center has 260+ accomplished mentors who will work with you in a one-on-one relationship to design your project. Our mentors can be found throughout the world and provide proactive support, lectures, and counsel on technology challenges and trends. They are executives, innovators, investors, board members, and entrepreneurs. They represent industries including consumer goods and retail, entrepreneurism, financial services, government, health care and pharmaceuticals, insurance, media, and nonprofits. Current mentors include executive leaders in companies such as Blackstone, Centene Corp., Citigroup, J.Crew, JetBlue, Johnson & Johnson, Vice Media, and other organizations. Visit ctm.columbia.edu/content/mentors to learn about our network.

Accepted individuals can begin at any time and shape their education either on campus or from the comfort of their home without having to follow a specific track or academic calendar. A range of optional activities will be held in our New York or Paris locations. With acclaimed research centers and schools, world-class faculty, and a global mentor network, Columbia University will provide you with expansive, thoughtful frameworks and an enriching experience that will power you to your next success.
